

Maoist era reaches end

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist Party on Monday formally ended the era of Mao Tse-tung, replacing the late party chairman's chosen heir, Hua Guofeng, with an advocate of Deng Xiaoping's marketization campaign.

The party's Central Committee issued a communiqué announcing Hua's long-expected resignation as leader of the party and his replacement by Hu Yaobang, 66, a close associate of Vice Chairman Deng, China's most powerful leader.

The chairmanship switch amounts to a seal of approval by the party leaders on Deng's political alignment with the West and his efforts to strengthen China's economy and forge a modern nation.

Deng's leadership has tried to cast aside what is described as Mao's unrealistic economic policies in favor of trying to improve living standards and of putting an end to divisive political policies.

Hua, criticized for adherence to the now-discredited Maoist line, was demoted to party vice chairman, apparently the most junior of six such posts.

Hua, who has been largely out of sight for the past seven months, offered his resignation in November, Xinhua said. Diplomatic sources said Hu, the party's general secretary, had been handling the party's day-to-day affairs since then.

Deng was named to another of Hua's posts — chairman of the key military commission — a job that diplomatic sources said he had been handling since November.

He now officially heads the 3.5 million-member army, which reportedly is unhappy with its declining influence during the current emphasis on economic advance.

Last September, Hua lost another of his jobs, as premier, when the National People's Congress reprimanded him in that capacity with another Deng ally, economic troubleshooter Zhao Ziyang.

In its communiqué Monday, the committee said Zhao has also been elected a party vice chairman. He joins Hua and the four previously elected vice chairmen — Deng, Ye Jianying, Li Xianian and Chen Yun — on the elite standing committee of the policy-setting Politburo.

Iranian clergy vows to avenge bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's clergy, blaming America, vowed Monday to avenge the bombing that killed Supreme Court chief justice and 68 other people at their party headquarters in Tehran, Iran's press reported.

The 10-year-old night killed Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, 52, the chief justice and leader of the clerical Islamic Republican Party; four Cabinet ministers, deputy ministers, 21 members of Parliament and other members of the IRP.

Beheshti was considered the second most powerful man in the revolution. Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, group claimed responsibility for the bombing, but most of Iran's political leaders believed it was the work of leftists and to violence because of the ouster of moderate president and the new clerical government.

Iran's Interim Presidential Council, governing since Bani-Sadr was removed from office, issued a statement vowing a down with enemies of Islam to the last breath.

Beheshti was a member of the three-man council that also selected Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani. Sources in Tehran told Associated Press in Beirut by telephone that Rajai and Rafsanjani were called out of the meeting of the IRP headquarters before the blast occurred.

Jury awaited in Atlanta trial

ANTA (AP) — A prosecutor said Monday he will only wait until after a new grand jury convenes July 7 to file the indictment needed to try Wayne B. Williams in the murder of one of 28 black youths.

Georgia law requires that a grand jury consider any murders before a suspect can be brought to trial.

Williams, a 23-year-old black free-lance cameraman, is charged with the murder in the death of Nathaniel Carter, 26, and 28 youths slain in a string of killings during almost two years.

Investigators have said they are continuing their probe of Williams in an attempt to prove their case against him and see if they can connect him with any of the other killing.

Williams' attorney, Mary Welcome, said Sunday that she is not sure if publicity about evidence against her client will aid potential jurors and make Williams "the 29th victim."

Welcome said she has not yet decided if she wants the case to another city if Williams is indicted.

She said one drawback to seeking a change of venue is that jurors and defense attorneys cannot agree on a new location. The judge will decide, "with the risk of putting it in another state," she said.

"Georgia and 'Nowhere, Georgia,' might be worse Atlanta."

In the court hearing last week, at which a judge allowed to seek an indictment against Williams, police stakeout testified that they had heard a splash in the Chattahoochee River May 22 shortly before Williams was seen driving over the bridge. Carter's body was found in the river three from the bridge two days later.

Several government officials issued statements blaming the leftist Mujahideen Khalq, a group that blends Marxism and Islamic rhetoric, and the Fedayeen Khalq, a Marxist-Leninist grouping.

Khomeini said: "Who are those sitting corners (hiding)? Are they human beings or savage beasts who dare not themselves emerge? They send other people's children . . . To carry out sabotage . . .

This was seen as a reference to Bani-Sadr, who has not been seen in public since Khomeini dismissed him as commander in chief of the armed forces 20 days ago.

The IRP issued a statement that vowed the Iranian revolution would "cut off the hands" of American and Zionism in the region, but also urged the people to remain calm and follow the dictates of Khomeini.

Parliament said that the former leader of Iran's provisional revolutionary government, ex-Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan, sent a letter of condolence to Khomeini. Since the IRP had led the campaign to drum Bazargan out of office, observers considered his note a conciliatory step.

Avatollah Hussein Ali Montazari, Khomeini's heir apparent, joined others in blaming the U.S. for the bombing that also killed his son, Hojatolleslam Mohammad Montazari, best known for his unsuccessful efforts to dispatch Iranian volunteers to Lebanon to fight Israel.

En route to Denver with President Reagan on Monday, Larry Speakes, deputy press secretary to the president, said: "We see this as a further indication of political instability in Iran" but made no further, immediate comment on the bombing or accusations against the U.S.

The atmosphere in Tehran was tense, and observers feared that by telephone from the AP office here feared armed underground opposition groups might take advantage of the funeral to start another round of trouble.

Demonstrations of mourning were reported in cities throughout Iran and Hezbollah (of God) fanatics, many of them with shaved heads, carried posters of Beheshti as they raced around Tehran on motorcycles.

Noel Reynolds to speak at Devotional assembly

Dr. Noel B. Reynolds, associate academic vice president for religious instruction and university studies, will speak on "Reason and Revelation" at the opening summer Devotional today.

The Devotional will be held at 10 a.m. in the dining Concert Hall of the Harris Fine Arts Center.

Dr. Reynolds, a professor of government and philosophy, was named last fall to direct BYU's general education program.

He graduated from BYU in 1967 with a B.A. degree in political science and philosophy. He earned M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in political theory and philosophy from Harvard in 1968 and 1971 respectively.

Dr. Reynolds served a mission to Uruguay for the LDS Church. He has also served as a bishop, in stake presidencies, on a high council and is currently a scoutmaster.

Democracy 'the best'

By LEE DAVIDSON
University Night Editor

Former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver, who once denounced America worldwide, called communism the most awesome challenge facing the country today, during a speech Sunday for Provo's annual Freedom Festival.

Cleaver addressed nearly 12,000 people in the Marriott Center during a 90-minute speech that received a standing ovation.

"The United States is the only obstacle blocking communist countries from taking over complete control of the world," he said.

Cleaver said he became convinced that democracy was the best government system available after he toured communist countries for five years.

Cleaver fled the United States to avoid imprisonment for charges stemming from a 1968 shooting in which three Oakland policemen were wounded.

"As long as I talked to Communists Party leaders, they painted a rosy picture of their system. But the common people told me what it was like," he said.

"One lady in Cuba said that if the borders were opened for unrestricted travel, the only people remaining would be Fidel Castro, Raoul Castro and Juan Almeida."

He compared communist countries to giant prisons with dictators as wardens who command an army to control a captive population.

"The same thing that is happening in Poland is happening around the world," he said. "Everywhere in the world people are enthusiastic about democracy."

"It's good to be in Provo where the spirit of '76 never died. The American revolution will never be complete until democracy is taken to every country in the world," he said.

"Americans need to join hands and march toward the great future in store for this country," he said.

Speaking of the United Nations, Cleaver said, "It may not be necessary to resign from the U.N., but we should form an organization with members who espouse democracy to show the world the difference between democracy and totalitarian forces."

"Many people refuse to think that I have changed, or they think I've made some type of deal, or want to block the kingdom of God or that I am an FBI agent," he said. "But I've reached the point that I don't care."

He assured the audience that he was a patriotic American and a Christian.

Cleaver told the University the terms of his parole from California were completed after a July Fourth celebration in San Jose.

After his parole completed, "We'll see what happens with the (LDS) church. All I can say now is that I am studying its doctrine."

Orientation greets freshmen

early 2,000 new freshmen have arrived at BYU for the summer term, according to James Palmer, director of university standards.

Orientation events for the new students took place all around campus Monday beginning at 8 a.m. and ending at 5 p.m.

We have a total of 2,500 transfer new students this summer,"

Palmer. "I assume that approximately 2,000 of those are men."

Among the activities for the new students Monday were a meeting to list students in choosing a major in a career, a meeting with the men and academic leaders of each college and a series of seminars on "Secrets to Success at BYU."

Y takes ninth place in collegiate sports

By JAY EVENSEN

University Staff Writer

BYU placed ninth in the 11th annual National Collegiate All-Sports Championship chosen by the (Tenn.) Journal.

The charting which ranks the nation's top 10 collegiate athletic programs chose UCLA as the national champion.

The only other Western Athletic Conference school included in the poll was Texas-El Paso, chosen 20th.

The paper determines the winners based on participation in what it calls "the NCAA's 10 leading sports"—cross country, football, soccer, basketball, wrestling, swimming, track and field, tennis, golf and baseball.

Glen Tuckett, athletic director at BYU, said he is very happy with the results of the poll. "We're in the top 10," he said. "We're in pretty good company," he said.

This year's ranking was not the highest BYU has received in the poll. Twice before, in 1976 and 1978, the Cougars were ranked fourth. BYU was rated fifth in 1977 and eighth in 1979.

NCAA tournament results are used for determining points in all sports, including football and basketball. Points in these sports are given according to the final rankings of The Associated Press poll.

Points were also determined through the College World Series finishes, baseball's College World Series and the final poll, and, in addition to the NCAA tennis tournament results, the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association poll.

Tuckett said he feels the selections were done fairly. "Using the AP poll is fine with me," he said.

He said because BYU has been in the poll's top 10 for several years now, he believes they will not really help receive many more than it has in previous years.

BYU earned 51 total points in the poll. This was broken down to 20 points for golf, 15 for track, nine for football, five for basketball and two for baseball.

No. 1-ranked UCLA earned 97 and was followed by Penn State. The Bruins have been named All-Sports champion three times in the past four years.

The list of All-Sports champions is compiled by Steve Williams, a staff writer for the Journal. He tracked the list 11 years ago while at the University of Tennessee and has been compiling it in connection with Journal officials.

This year's top 20 were as follows:

1. UCLA
2. Arizona State
3. Indiana
4. Michigan
5. Oklahoma State
6. Penn State
7. Michigan
8. Southern Methodist
9. BYU
10. Southern California

12. Houston
13. Arkansas
14. Auburn
15. Texas
16. Iowa State

Bombing stopped

VATICAN CITY — Vatican security agents overpowered a 54-year-old Italian on Monday as he tried to plant a homemade bomb before 20,000 people packed in St. Peter's Basilica, police reported.

"The blast would have killed scores of people and inflicted extremely heavy damage to the basilica," a police official said.

Police identified the man as Giuseppe Santangelo of Salerno, near Naples.

Vatican officials refused to say if Pope John Paul II, who is in the hospital, was told of the incident.

Israeli vote begins

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israelis vote today in a bitter national election which the polls see producing no decisive majority for either Prime Minister Menachem Begin or challenger Shimon Peres.

A poll published Monday in the Haaretz newspaper showed Peres' Labor Party leading Begin's Likud Bloc by 43 seats to 40 in the 120-seat Parliament.

Fallout examined

ST. GEORGE, Utah — For the first time since radioactive fallout began drifting down on eastern Nevada and southern Utah 30 years ago, scientists are making a list of people who live in the path of the mushroom clouds and later developed cancer.

Dr. Carl Johnson, Denver, is conducting the study under a National Radiation Research Foundation grant. Johnson, while at the Jefferson County Health Department, alerted the public to plutonium contamination near the Rocky Mountain Arsenal.

More than 1,200 southern Utah, Nevada and Arizona residents are suing the federal government, blaming radioactive fallout for the cancers they and their families have suffered since the early 1950s.

TV coalition cancels boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coalition for Better Television, declaring itself gratified by the initial response of major TV advertisers, canceled plans Monday for an immediate boycott of products made by companies sponsoring programs deemed to include too much sex and violence.

"We are, at this time, convinced that those companies which expressed little concern during our monitoring period are now concerned," said the Rev. Donald E. Wildmon, chairman of the coalition.

"We feel we are accomplishing our goal despite the continuing rhetoric of the networks," Wildmon said. "And while the networks may be arrogant enough to continue the battle of words, they are not stupid enough to produce product they cannot sell."

The Coalition for Better Television, formed last February, is an organization of more than 300 mostly conservative and religious groups led by the Moral Majority and Wildmon's National Federation for Decency.

Its avowed purpose is to clean up television through product boycotts designed to make it difficult for the major networks to find sponsors for shows considered to contain "gratuitous sex, violence or obscenity."

A boycott was a real possibility, Wildmon said at the news conference Monday. He was joined by the Moral Majority's Rev. Jerry Falwell and anti-ERA activist Phyllis Schlafly. Wildmon also said the group would continue its pressure campaign and its monitoring of network programming.

Since March, the group has been compiling lists of television shows deemed most offensive and the advertisers who sponsor them.

As he has in past news conferences, Wildmon refused to disclose any details of meetings he said he had with advertisers. He also declined to reveal programs identified as offensive by the group's monitors or say whether he had received commitments from corporate sponsors to withdraw commercials from those programs this fall.

Falwell said he didn't want to go beyond Wildmon's statement, but then added: "If we were to stand here today and to divulge all the contents of all the meetings the coalition has had with all the advertisers, and the various agreements that have been made, and leave the impression that these eight companies were the bad guys but they capitulated, then obviously we would be amalgaing the boycott because we've done the same thing."

The major networks previously have criticized coalition members as would-be censors, but spokesmen for ABC and CBS had no comment on the group's announcement Monday.

NBC spokesman Curt Block said his network's position on the coalition and its tactics has been made abundantly clear and remains unchanged. We believe our programming reflects the wide diversity of American tastes. We have no further comment at this time."

R-film ads to begin

By DEBBIE GIUNTA
University City Editor

The Deseret News will begin advertising R-rated movies Friday, according to the advertising managers of Plitt and Mann Theaters in Salt Lake City.

The newspaper, which is privately owned by the LDS Church, will print the new movie advertisements on movie advertisements on Thursday, said a secretary to Publisher Wendell Ashton.

Jerry Cahill, a spokesman for the LDS Church, said he was not aware of the policy change and had no comment.

Jah Fasselin, the advertising manager for Plitt Theaters, said the ads were originally to begin June 26 but were postponed until Friday, so the paper could print a statement to the public explaining the new change.

Fasselin said he saw the change as a positive move. "For some time now, The Deseret News has been researching whether or not it was to the paper's advantage to advertise R-rated movies," Fasselin said. He said approximately 50 percent of the movies currently being produced are rated R, and advertising in The Deseret News would most likely increase exposure for the films.

"We never actively pursued a policy change to advertise R-rated movies," Fasselin said.

"We accepted the policy because we had no other choice. It was the paper's option."

He said although he was not told the reason, R-rated movies were not advertised in The Deseret News, he thought it was because of the Mormon Church's stance on the films.

Duane Belisle, advertising manager for Mann Theaters in Salt Lake City, said in the past, people were used to having to look in The Salt Lake Tribune for R-rated movie listings.

"I don't know what the official reason is, but I think subscriber pressure had some-

President Kimball rests after surgery

LDS President Spencer W. Kimball was released from LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City Monday morning after doctors performed a "tune-up" on his heart pacemaker, according to Jerry Cahill, church spokesman.

"President Kimball was admitted to LDS Hospital Saturday for minor surgery," Cahill said.

According to Cahill, President Kimball, 86, needed the surgery to have his heart pacemaker, installed six weeks ago, checked and adjusted.

"President Kimball is feeling fine, and is home resting," Cahill said.

Cahill added that President Kimball should be returning to work "within the next few days."

Record the Way the Pros Do

dbx* noise reduction has been used for years by professional recording studios, and no wonder—dynamic range of 110 dB (more than that of many live performances and approaching the difference between total silence and physically harmful sound pressure levels) and noise reduction of 30 dB (perhaps 3-5 times as much as Dolby noise reduction under similar circumstances). The audible improvement is remarkable—ordinary cassettes recorded and played back with dbx are capable of better performance than the finest open-reel decks, in the areas of dynamic range, S/N ratio, and noise characteristics.

Technics plus dbx—an unbeatable combination for performance which rivals the finest fidelity available anywhere.

Tele-communications service to save money on Y campus

By JANEIL McSPADDEN
University Staff Writer

BYU telephone office says the university has $1,000 per month and is looking at ways to save more money, according to Ferrellery, Tele-Communications Manager.

Savings come through cutting costs on distance calls by having a computer seek the most economical route for each call and on allowing use of the installation to be on campus by BYU personnel rather than Mountain Bell, he said.

Another idea being considered is to assist with the telephone deposits. "For those concerned with required deposits from Mountain Bell for telephones, we are exploring the possibility of putting student dorms within university telephone lines," Mallory said.

Other possibilities include adding a micro-computer to the switch. Circa data communications, in which one university computer "talks" to another university computer, an incoming WATS calls for BYU personnel, he said.

Info-Switch

August, Mallory conducted a survey of the amount of money the university is saving by using an Info-Switch system. Because personnel used the Info-Switch method the direct-distance-dialing method, he said that the system saved the university $1,000.

Info-Switch system is a computerized, cost-routing, long-distance telephone system which is based on a sequence of numbers used for dialing procedures.

BYU telephone office signed a lease with Mountain Bell contracting for a telephone to be used within the university. Mallory said that BYU can keep track of all calls by BYU personnel including such features as tracking project codes for accounting procedures.

The Info-Switch system is the No. 1 money saver for the telephone office, according to Mallory. With a regular check of the printout, he said, he is able to figure the high and low calling point times of the day and then determine maximum utilization for the system.

"Our goal is to get the proper mix of lines to best serve the university," Mallory said. "If personnel can make their calls at regular low points, the Info-Switch system could be used to the maximum." he said.

If callers try to dial out during the high points of the day and receive busy tones (the system has only a certain number of lines available at one time), the system cannot be used to its capacity, thus hindering our efforts to save money," Mallory said.

CAP system

Mallory said that the telephone office has also experienced great success with the Customer-Administration-Panel system added in June 1980.

The system costs the telephone office approximately $130 to $150 per month; however, it saves BYU up to $1,000 per month, he said.

Provo areas to receive additional ZIP codes

Provo will be divided into two ZIP code areas, effective Aug. 15, beginning in the city, said Stephen L. Johnson, acting Provo Postmaster.

An announcement said the new ZIP code, 84604, will be used for the areas within the boundaries of North and South Streets and east of I-15 to the north city limits.

This new code will include all student housing on campus said John Payne, a clerk in the Provo Post Office. However, he said, all buildings on campus will remain 84602.

The statement explained the present ZIP code of 84601 will remain the same for the areas south of and including both sides of 800 North and 820 North Streets to the south city limits. The area west of I-15 will also remain the same.

Another ZIP code, 84603, has been assigned to customers who receive mail through post office lockboxes at the Main Post Office.

Johnson said it will not be necessary to discard present supplies of stationery which are printed with the old ZIP code.

The Provo Post Office sorts and delivers more than 82,000 pieces of mail each day, said Payne.

"This keeps our customers happy," Mallory said. He said Mountain Bell requires up to two weeks' notice for switching telephone numbers. The telephone office at BYU can make these changes in a few hours.

According to Mallory, computer programming also has contributed to the money-saving efforts of the telephone office.

Billing can be done automatically, and the telephone directory can be available for updating at any time, he said.

Y hosts visiting gymnasts

Members of the U.S. Junior National Gymnastics Team are training at BYU for two weeks following completion of the national junior gymnastics championships Saturday in the Smith Fieldhouse.

The 35 team members were selected on the basis of their performances at the three-day championships held last week.

Twelve team members will compete next week in the U.S. Gymnastics Festival in Syracuse, N.Y., and members in the junior elite division will compete later this summer in West Germany.

BYU gymnastics coach Wayne Young, who also directed the championship meet, said the competition put BYU on the map of the gymnastics world.

"Now they are aware of what type of program we are running here," he said.

Some of the team's stars include identical twin brothers Dan and Dennis Hayden of Tucson, Ariz., who finished first and second respectively in the all-around championship.

NCAA-AIAW spat divides Y coaches

By MARK DEAN
University Staff Writer

After nearly a decade of service, the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women is finding strong competition from the NCAA for control of women's sports.

Every collegiate coach and administrator in women's athletics has been given the choice between membership in one of the two organizations.

For many it wasn't an easy choice.

The opportunity of national media coverage and exposure associated with the NCAA is very enticing to some, but for others, loyalty remains with the AIAW.

The NCAA, as an example, offers travel expenses to and from national championships, greater access to national television and big money in freedom in recruiting — the AIAW does not.

Still, AIAW supporters like AIAW President Donna Lopiano claim NCAA recruiting rules for women will remain essentially the same as they've been for men and that could cause some concern.

She says undue pressure will be put on young women athletes and the increased cost of recruiting will break many smaller programs.

Most importantly, she says women's sports advocates may lose their voice in determining policy in the male-oriented and dominated NCAA.

In addition, the AIAW allows more participants in more sports in regional championships, she added.

The debate has split many colleges and universities across the nation and those in Utah are no exception.

Coaches at BYU have split down the middle in joining the competing organization with four team coaches deciding to stay in the AIAW (gymnastics, swimming, cross country and track and field) and another four (baseball, golf, tennis and volleyball) deciding to join the NCAA.

The University of Utah, meanwhile, has allowed individual coaches to decide the fate of each individual sport while Weber State and Utah State have decided to remain entirely in the AIAW.

The short-term result will be a split in the Intermountain Athletic Conference that will eliminate automatic bids to championship tournaments — the new conferences won't have enough teams to qualify.

Many coaches are joining the NCAA in hopes of greater opportunities and a fear that in a few years the AIAW may no longer be around. BYU women's golf coach Gary Howard is one of those.

"It seems like the competition will be split fairly evenly between the NCAA and the AIAW next year, but in a few years the AIAW will be replaced by the NCAA," he said.

Others, like BYU swimming coach Tim Powers, say they believe that dealing with both men and women will be a lot less frustrating.

"I always felt the AIAW were crazy," Powers said, "but we had to belong to the AIAW or they would have excluded us from their regional championships. It's been a lot of fun for women and I think many coaches will get out now that they have the chance."

She says undue pressure will be put on young women athletes and the increased cost of recruiting will break many smaller programs.

Most importantly, she says women's sports advocates may lose their voice in determining policy in the male-oriented and dominated NCAA.

In addition, the AIAW allows more participants in more sports in regional championships, she added.

The debate has split many colleges and universities across the nation and those in Utah are no exception.

Coaches at BYU have split down the middle in joining the competing organization with four team coaches deciding to stay in the AIAW (gymnastics, swimming, cross country and track and field) and another four (baseball, golf, tennis and volleyball) deciding to join the NCAA.

The University of Utah, meanwhile, has allowed individual coaches to decide the fate of each individual sport while Weber State and Utah State have decided to remain entirely in the AIAW.

The short-term result will be a split in the Intermountain Athletic Conference that will eliminate automatic bids to championship tournaments — the new conferences won't have enough teams to qualify.

Still others are skeptical about what the NCAA — the new kid on the block in women's sports — plans to do.

"Things are too much up in the air with the NCAA," said Debbie Hill who coaches the women's gymnastics team at the University of Utah. "They can't tell us who we'll be competing with and they can't tell us under what conditions. We're going to wait and see until they do."

Colleges and universities have until 1984 to decide which organization they want to belong to and stay with. Until then, it could be an interesting three years.

Miss Utah's reign 'rewarding'

By DON FULTON
Universe Staff Writer

In search of a religious and musical education, Jean Bullard, Miss Utah 1980, left North Carolina four years ago and came to BYU.

A full-blooded Lumbee, American Indian,

Miss Bullard was raised in a religious home. "My father, who is a Methodist minister, suggested I attend BYU because of the religious training accompanying the academics. When some friends told me about the Lamanite Generation, the Indian program and the good music department at BYU it didn't take long for me to make up my mind," she said.

Miss Bullard was chosen from among the Indians in Utah to be the Miss Indian Scholar. This position allowed her to enter and win the Miss Utah pageant in June of 1980.

"The most rewarding benefit of being Miss Utah was the personal growth I received. The position helped me gain confidence, developed my character and supplemented my general education of life," Miss Bullard said.

"It was important to me that the Miss Utah competition stressed education and not just beauty like other competitions," she said.

The fourth Miss Bullard passed on her crown to Jonelle Smith, Miss Utah 1981. Miss

Smith is a BYU senior from Prescott, Ariz., majoring in vocal performance.

Miss Bullard described what activities she was involved in as Miss Utah. "During my reign, I was involved in two to four related activities each month. These included the master of ceremonies at many pageants; spoke at banquets for civic, social and Mormon Church events; and participated in about 25 parades."

Miss Bullard said there were many highlights of her reign. She said she enjoyed the "Smith Food King Food and Health Show" at the Salt Lake City. With her at the exhibition were Miss America, Miss World, Joe Namath and many Olympic Gold Medal winners. She was in charge of the entertainment for an Indian handicapped workshop in Phoenix, Ariz.

Miss Bullard traveled to Atlantic City, N.J., last September where she participated in the Miss America pageant. She was awarded a scholarship from the competition "Two other BYU grads, Miss Idaho and Miss Oregon, also participated in the pageant," she said.

"The Miss America competition is the next step above the Miss Utah competition. It covers everything from beauty and talent to intellect," Miss Bullard said. "The Miss America competition is the most prestigious and should be fused with the Miss USA pageant, which is only a beauty pageant and doesn't consider the scholastic abilities of the competitors."

After the pageant, Miss Bullard toured New York City and then visited Washington, D.C. where she met

Utah Senators and the chairman of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

"She was a fantastic representative of Utah. She exemplified all of the high ideals that the state of Utah stands for," said Miss Janie Thompson, artistic director of the Lamanite Generation.

Local films reviewed; given 'shallow' rating

The Cannibal Run
(PG: Adult situations Language)

By DAN LeDUC
Universe Staff Writer

If you want to know why some women are exploited as sex objects in our society, see the new film, "The Cannibal Run."

The film has more stars than the Miss Way. However, "The Cannibal Run" is shallow and not worth the time.

The only plot the film offers is an auto race across the United States. Everyone jumps in fast cars and tries to outdo all the "smokies."

Needham, who directed the film, relies on big name stars to pick up this shallowness, but fails miserably.

I found it hard to picture Dom DeLuise as the "smasher," "Captain Chaos," who beats up on a motorcycle and saves some lady's dog. The film pushed this extreme a little bit too far.

Roger Moore, who plays himself in the film, completely destroys his image as "Bond" by suggesting about all of his international accomplishments. Again the film goes too far.

Adrienne Barbeau, who looks quite healthy in the film, talks of shooting her way out of several speeding tickets, except for the one she received from a woman officer.

There are some interesting scenes and some funny lines. However, "The Cannibal Run" is just another remake of "Smoky and the Bandit." Hopefully this will be the last.

Search and Destroy
(PG: violence, some profanity)

By STEPHEN GERZELI
Universe Staff Writer

From the preview clippings, it appeared that the film had all the ingredients for an action-packed martial arts thriller. But after seeing it, you may discover that it was nothing more than a close copy of the picture, "Gangs of Gore Black," shown about two years ago and starring Chuck Norris.

Just like "Good Guys," this film dealt with a special task force sent to Vietnam, but with a mission to accompany a Vietnamese political representative through the combat zones. As the members of the task force made their way through the jungle to a rendezvous point, they were ambushed. The representatives didn't help save one of the force and therefore was left behind.

Ten years later the scene changed to Niagara Falls where two from the task force have been murdered. Someone was out for revenge.

As for the acting, it was very shallow. There wasn't enough character development. The only redeeming factor in the film was George Kennedy.

However, for an actor known for his screen presence, this was a poor role for him. He portrayed an incompetent sheriff in a subdued role that could have been left out of the story altogether.

The only thing that kept the film from being worse was "a good scene of martial arts, but they never came."

If you go expecting a real action-packed story with fast, blood-curdling hand-to-hand combat, you'll be disappointed. This is one movie not worth seeing — you'll leave "searching" for reasons why you came.

Miss Utah's reign 'rewarding'

By DON FULTON
Universe Staff Writer

In search of a religious and musical education, Jean Bullard, Miss Utah 1980, left North Carolina four years ago and came to BYU.

A full-blooded Lumbee, American Indian,

Miss Bullard was raised in a religious home. "My father, who is a Methodist minister, suggested I attend BYU because of the religious training accompanying the academics. When some friends told me about the Lamanite Generation, the Indian program and the good music department at BYU it didn't take long for me to make up my mind," she said.

Miss Bullard was chosen from among the Indians in Utah to be the Miss Indian Scholar. This position allowed her to enter and win the Miss Utah pageant in June of 1980.

"The most rewarding benefit of being Miss Utah was the personal growth I received. The position helped me gain confidence, developed my character and supplemented my general education of life," Miss Bullard said.

"It was important to me that the Miss Utah competition stressed education and not just beauty like other competitions," she said.

The fourth Miss Bullard passed on her crown to Jonelle Smith, Miss Utah 1981. Miss

Smith is a BYU senior from Prescott, Ariz., majoring in vocal performance.

Miss Bullard described what activities she was involved in as Miss Utah. "During my reign, I was involved in two to four related activities each month. These included the master of ceremonies at many pageants; spoke at banquets for civic, social and Mormon Church events; and participated in about 25 parades."

"The Miss America competition is the next step above the Miss Utah competition. It covers everything from beauty and talent to intellect," Miss Bullard said. "The Miss America competition is the most prestigious and should be fused with the Miss USA pageant, which is only a beauty pageant and doesn't consider the scholastic abilities of the competitors."

After the pageant, Miss Bullard toured New York City and then visited Washington, D.C. where she met

Utah Senators and the chairman of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

"She was a fantastic representative of Utah. She exemplified all of the high ideals that the state of Utah stands for," said Miss Janie Thompson, artistic director of the Lamanite Generation.
